EXPONENTIAL GROWTH NECESSITATES NEW HIRES; NINE ELMS DEVELOPMENT ADDS TO ITS TEAM

As business has picked up for Nine Elms this summer – and in anticipation of an even busier fall season – new personnel have been added to the sales team.

Las Vegas, Nevada --- Nine Elms Development LLC could still be called a small company, but it is certainly larger than it was only a few months ago. Following a busy summer – and in preparation for an even busier fall season – Nine Elms has added two new hires to its staff: Sue Berry, Business Development, and Nathan Wilson, Business Development Manager, Europe and Africa.

Sue Berry joined Nine Elms in July on the wave of interest generated by attendance at the Elko Mining Expo and JCK Las Vegas. With years of experience in cold calling, customer service, and industrial sales, Sue has been a welcome addition to the team. Working hand in hand with Karla Ely, Director of Operations, Sue has helped Nine Elms increase service to new and existing clients in several sectors.

Nathan Wilson will officially join Nine Elms on October 1 of this year. Nathan is a recent college graduate. He has a degree in business administration from Western Connecticut State University, with a specialization in small businesses and entrepreneurship. Nathan's degree makes him uniquely qualified for Nine Elms, along with his enthusiasm and drive. He will quickly add experience to his education with an inaugural attendance to ANUGA with Liese Peterson and Don Peterson, CEO and Chairman, respectively. He is scheduled to meet exhibitors from all over Europe and South Africa, a fitting beginning as he will focus especially on these areas in the future.

Nine Elms prides itself on being a company which streamlines and simplifies North American market access for innovative international companies, while offering an array of services that also appeal to companies seeking greater distribution in the US. This business model has found a growing audience abroad, and is resulting in a true banner year for the company. Both Sue and Nathan will help Nine Elms continue to reach a wider audience, and improve the hands-on support Nine Elms works to provide every client.

Nine Elms will be present at the ANUGA trade fair this October in Cologne, Germany, from the 7th through the 11th of the month. Liese, Don, and Nathan will be meeting with prospective clients for the entirety of the trade show. Look for them there.
